DAVISON DALZIEL, ESQ., M.P. — W. P. Frith, R.A.

Exhibited in 1851, with the following quotation:—

"Hogarth has run a great risk since the peace; he went to France, accompanied by some friends, and was so imprudent as to be taking a sketch of the drawbridge at Calais. He was seized and carried to the Governor, where he was obliged to prove his vocation by producing several caricatures, etc., such as would by no means serve the purpose of an engineer. He was told by the Governor that, had not the peace been actually signed, he should have hung him immediately on the ramparts."—Horace Walpole's Letters, 1748.

Interior of the Governor's Court at Calais; on the l. is the Governor, seated at a table, and examining a letter bearing the words "To Mr. W. Hogarth, The Painter. London," and some sketches, which his secretary is handing him; the Court is divided by a barrier, on the farther side of which stands Hogarth guarded by two soldiers, and holding a small portfolio and a sketch for the portrait of Lord Lovat; his dog is beside him, and the Court is thronged with numerous male and female figures, prominent among whom are a woman with a child, and a monk. Behind Hogarth stands a man who holds out over the former's head a letter addressed to "Mr. W. Hogarth, Calais." Through an archway in the r. background other figures are seen, trying to pass the soldier who keeps the door. Signed and dated, "W. P. Frith, 1851." Panel, 43 by 60 in.

TRUSTEES OF THE ROYAL HOLLOWAY COLLEGE. W. P. Frith, R.A.

Scene at the Great Western Railway Station. On the r. is a man being arrested by detectives, as he is stepping into the train; his wife looks on from the carriage. Next to this incident is the parting of a bride from her bridesmaids; her hand rests on the arm of her husband. Then comes a sergeant, with a batch of recruits, bidding farewell to his wife and child. More in the foreground a cabman is arguing with a foreigner and his wife. Near them is a lady saying goodbye to her little boy, whom his father is taking to school with his elder brother. A luggage truck is being wheeled by a porter through the crowd, and behind it are a woman with her husband and children. In the l. foreground a gamekeeper is coupling a brace of setters; an old lady is asking a porter for leave to take her dog into the carriage. Many other incidents are depicted.

In a letter from the artist, dated Sept. 1st, 1887, the following passage occurs: "The group of children in the foreground—boys going to school—were portraits of my own family; the father being painted from myself. The two police officers arresting the man who is about to step into the train are portraits of two well-known detectives, Messrs. Brett and Haydon." Signed and dated, "W. P. Frith, fec^{t} 1862." 42 KING CHARLES THE SECOND'S LAST SUNDAY.

J. GRIFFITH-DEARDEN, ESQ. — W. P. Frith, R.A.

Exhibited, in 1867, with the following quotation:—

"I can never forget the inexpressible luxury and prophanenesse, gaming and all dissoluteness, and as it were total forgetfulnesse of God (it being Sunday evening), which this day se'nnight I was witnesse of, the King sitting and toying with his concubines, Portsmouth, Cleaveland, and Mazarine, etc., a French boy singing love-songs in that glorious gallery, whilst about twenty of the great courtiers and other dissolute persons were at basset round a large table, a bank of at least £2000 in gold before them, upon which two gentlemen who were with me made reflexions with astonishment. Six days after, all was in the dust!"—Evelyn's Diary.

The following also describes the situation depicted:—

"His palace had seldom presented a gayer or more scandalous appearance than on the evening of Sunday, the first of February, 1685. Some grave persons who had gone thither, after the fashion of that age, to pay their duty to their sovereign, and who had expected that, on such a day, his Court would wear a decent appearance, were struck with astonishment. . . . The great gallery of Whitehall, an admirable relic of the magnificence of the Tudors, was crowded with revellers and gamblers. . . . Barbara Palmer, Duchess of Cleveland, was there, no longer young, but still retaining some traces of that superb and voluptuous loveliness, which twenty years before overcame the hearts of all men. There, too, was the Duchess of Portsmouth, whose soft and infantine features were lighted up with the vivacity of France. Hortensia Mancini, Duchess of Mazarin, and niece of the Great Cardinal, completed the group. . . . No gift of nature or of fortune seemed to be wanting to her. Her face was beautiful with the rich beauty of the south, her understanding quick, her manners graceful, her rank exalted, her possessions immense. . . . Hortensia's French page, a handsome boy . . . warbled some amorous verses. A party of twenty courtiers was seated at cards round a large table, on which gold was heaped in mountains."—Macaulay's History of England.

"It was related how Claude Duval, the French page of the Duke of Richmond, took to the road, became captain of a formidable gang, and had the honour to be named first in a royal proclamation against notorious offenders; how at the head of his troop he stopped a lady's coach, in which there was a booty of four hundred pounds; how he took only one hundred and suffered the fair owner to ransom the rest by dancing a coranto with him on the heath."—Macaulay's History of England.

50 LIFE AT THE SEASIDE.

H.M. The King. — W. P. Frith, R.A.

(From Buckingham Palace.)

The scene is laid on Ramsgate sands, which are crowded with figures.

In the first volume of his Autobiography and Reminiscences the artist makes the following references to this picture:—

"My summer holiday of 1851 was spent at Ramsgate. Weary of costume-painting, I had determined to try my hand on modern life, with all its drawbacks of unpicturesque dress. The variety of character on Ramsgate Sands attracted me—all sorts and conditions of men and women were there. Pretty groups of ladies were to be found, reading, idling, working, and unconsciously forming themselves into very paintable compositions.

"The summer of 1852 found me again at Ramsgate, mainly for the purpose of painting the background, which I wished to make locally accurate. Photography was in its infancy at that time; I had therefore to rely on my own drawings of houses, cliffs, and bathing-machines.

"The greater part of the year 1853 was devoted to the 'Sands' picture."

Exhibited 1854. Canvas, 30 by 60 in.

"Voltaire dining with the Duc de Sulli (in the summer of 1725).... A servant whispers him, that somebody has called and wants him below. . . . Voltaire descends. . . . At the door of a carriage hands seize him. . . . Duc de Rohan inside, who utters, 'Now then,' whereupon two hired bullies descend from a hackney coach . . . scandalous actuality of horsewhipping descends on the back of poor Voltaire. . . . 'That will do,' says Rohan, and the gallant ducal party drive off, Voltaire rushing upstairs again in such a mood as is easy to fancy. Everybody is sorry, inconsolable, nobody volunteers to help in avenging. 'Monseigneur de Sulli, is not such atrocity done to one of your guests an insult to yourself?' asks Voltaire. 'Well, yes, perhaps, but——' Monseigneur de Sulli shrugs his shoulders and proposes nothing. Voltaire withdrew of course in a most blazing condition to consider what he could on his own strength do in this conjuncture. . . . He challenged the Duc de Rohan. Rohan accepted not without some difficulty . . . but withal confessed to his wife. The result was no measuring of swords took place; . . . but a convenient Lettre de Cachet put Voltaire again in the Bastille, where for six months he lodged a second time, the innocent not the guilty."—Carlyle's "Frederick the Great."

Exhibited in 1876 with the following quotation:—

"Eight appears to be the ordinary age at which children join the agricultural gangs in the Fens; in some instances they have been known to do so even at four. It is a common practice with parents to stipulate that if the elder children are hired to the gangmaster he must take the younger ones too. The distances they have to walk, or rather run, before the labours of the day begin, are astounding; sometimes eight miles a day. They leave at five in the morning, under the care of the gangmaster, and return at five at night. They work eight or nine hours; and during the last hour they are at work 'they will ask,' said an old gangmaster, 'forty times, what o'clock it is.'"
